ENTRYWAY

Next to the home's main door, the wall that leads into the home was covered in dark wood laminates that transform a once ordinary wall into a striking feature. To capitalise on the apartment's high 3.2m ceilings, the box-up in the entryway was removed and replaced with the same dark wood laminates.

#TEXTURE PLAY

Opt for a varied textural palette, such as natural layers, glossy surfaces and printed motifs, to create visual interest in a home.

OVERALL

A modern home with a luxurious twist, that was the design brief given to designer Cindy Wang from Dreamcatcher Interior Design for this home's renovation. Despite sharing the same space, the living and dining zones come with their own unique fittings. The former features a television feature wall constructed out of marble-effect laminates, while the latter was fitted with a dedicated pantry area.

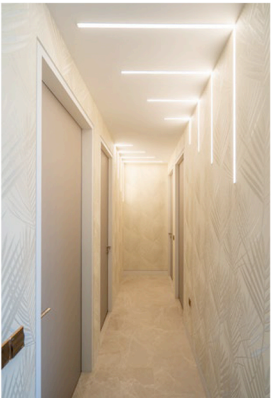

LIVING

Creating a subtle demarcation between the open-concept communal space is a custom-made display case that serves as a focal point when entering the living area. Constructed out of dark walnut laminates with a see-through glass door and embedded LED lightstrips, the case is primarily used for displaying the homeowners' wine collection and family trinkets.

CORRIDOR

As an homage to the homeowners' love for nature, all the vertical surfaces along the corridor leading into the sleeping quarters were covered with wallpaper that had leafy motifs printed on them. Meanwhile, a pair of four LED light strips at varying lengths were installed on either side of the walkway, which helps to further enhance the details of the wallpaper.

STORAGE

Occupying the home's entryway is a set of wood-laminated built-in cabinets that serve a variety of functions. In addition to being a landing spot for the occupants' daily wearables, the structure also encompasses an open shelf that has been fitted with a black aluminium frame for display purposes.
