LESS IS MORE

This three-bedroom apartment has lightweight contemporary furniture pieces and soothing wood elements to attribute for its tranquil and comforting ambience

When designer Cindy Wang of Dreamcatcher Interior Design was approached for the renovation of this three-bedroom condominium unit located in the west of Singapore, she had to find a way to transform its relatively drab layout into a home suitable for a modern couple. With the Scandinavian theme in mind, the designer then employed the use of updated furnishings, finishes and fittings to create a cosy love nest oozing a bright and airy atmosphere.

1 LIVING

The television feature wall is the main focal point in the living room with its unique design. Set against a white laminated base, the feature wall also encompasses closed storage units for household items and open shelves for a noteworthy toy collection. However, instead of closing off all the corners, Cindy kept the design to a C-shape that prevents the element from feeling too boxy and rigid.

2 KITCHEN

Cindy employed the use of white quartz countertops and tempered glass backsplash in the kitchen to provide long-term durability. Meanwhile, the use of white and wood laminates on the cabinetry maintains visual and design consistency to the Scandinavian concept. Besides providing illumination, embedded cove lighting within the cabinets also create a cosy vibe in the space.

"Besides wanting their home to have typical Scandinavian elements, the homeowners also wanted an uncluttered look. As such, we made sure our designs all followed a streamlined approach to achieve the desired style."

3 MASTER BEDROOM

Instead of using the recess in the wall of the master bedroom as an entertainment centre, the homeowners requested to convert the space into a study corner. As such, the designer installed a work desk and an accompanying storage-cum-display cabinet to accommodate their request. The design of this unit was kept streamlined with pull-out drawers and simple white-and-woodgrained laminated surfaces.
